

MARVELOUS WATER SIGHT TO BE SHOWN

An Unique Demonstration to Be Witnessed at the Jamestown Exposition.

REVOLUTIONIZE WARFARE

Light Can Be Utilized for Many Purposes to Great Advantage.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NORFOLK, VA., April 21.—Scientific marvels follow each other so rapidly nowadays that each may be said to tread upon another's heels. Equally far-reaching in its effect upon the modern world as wireless telegraphy will be the remarkable water light which will be shown as a live exhibit in all of its phases at the Jamestown Celebration in Hampton Roads in 1907.

Various Uses.
This wonderful light is used in a great variety of ways and for many useful purposes. Of its various forms the most spectacular and thrilling, and the one embodying the greatest possibilities for revolutionizing former methods of warfare, is the projectile—a magazine of intense light made to resemble a considerable length of time and constructed so as to be fired out of a gun, and thrown as far as an ordinary shell can be thrown. This projectile is composed of the most powerful and only light of the kind in the world. Its possibilities are almost infinite. It is a shining among lurking vessels in a dark sea, disclosing them in all their details; it can light up the bottom of the sea for divers and bridge builders; it can betray the position of hiding submarines and other craft and it can turn light into day over a wide area wherever it is directed by the hand of the man behind the light gun.

As a Life Saver.

Multifarious are the uses to which the new light is put. Attached to life buoys, they are act of throwing the life buoy, unseals the light, carries it overboard and ignites it instantly. The capacity of the life buoy light is about 200 candle power, and it will burn for one hour. It is not extinguished by heavy seas or wind. Its value in the life saving service can readily be imagined. Distributed around the deck of vessels ready for instant use, they form a valuable adjunct to other methods of saving life at sea in the darkest night. It does not require much effort of the imagination to conceive of the delight which a brightly lighted life buoy would bring to the heart of a man struggling in the dark waters of the ocean on a moonless and starless night.

Daily Exhibitions.

This remarkable light is used as a fireman's search light, in which case it can be taken through a building full of smoke to locate fire or used about the engine or hose carriage in dark streets. It is also used on land or water for such purposes as a large deck flare, for building bridges, raising wrecks, for flag traps or for emergencies on railroads or steamboats, for which purpose it is

WAVERLY SOCIAL
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

WAVERLY, VA., April 21.—Very prominent among the Easter-tide social events in Waverly was the entertainment of the Cupid Club and its guests Monday evening by Misses S. J. and S. B. Burt, of No. 105 West Main Street.

Various progressive games and melodious music enthroned merriment and vivacity, which reigned supreme from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Refreshments, fruits and domestic candies were sumptuously served. The guests of the club included Misses Hattie Chapman, May Taylor and Ruth Chappell, of Petersburg; Miss Mary Cowell, of Wayboro, N. C.; and Misses Ruth Spratley, Mary W. May, Elsie M. West, Ethel Daniel and Christine Ellis.

A brilliant Easter collation was danced at the Masonic Temple on Tuesday evening. Notwithstanding the younger set did not assist, for they knew they would have the dance all Tuesday.

The commodious ball-room was strained to its utmost to accommodate those in attendance.

The Philomathian Club met with Miss Blanche Westwood Friday evening.

Among the college girls who spent the Easter holidays with their parents in Waverly were Misses Elsie M. West, Ethel Daniel, Mary W. May and Estelle Fitzhugh.

Mrs. Katherine B. Burt and little daughter, Mary, of Richmond, are visiting Mrs. Burt's father, Dr. John A. Broadus, of Bowling Green.

Misses Hattie and Ruth Chappell, of Petersburg, and Mr. Samuel Burt, of Bedford City, are visiting Mr. P. Fleetwood and family this week.

Miss Gertrude Bain, of Gray, visited her aunt, Mr. Hancock, of No. 238 East Main Street, Tuesday.

Professor D. J. Sipe returned from Halifax county on Monday, where he visited his people during the holidays.

Miss May Taylor, of Petersburg, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Daniel, this week.

Mrs. Lizzie B. Chappell is visiting her mother, Mrs. Lucy A. Chappell, on corner of Main and Hunter Streets.

Where Nations Meet.
Of all the railway stations in Europe, perhaps even in the world, the one at Basel, belonging to the Swiss Federal Railways, is the most varied in its nationality of passengers and types of rolling stock. It is, in fact, a huge junction through which travelers from all the corners of the continent must often pass.

PLACES OF LONG AGO

West Point in Its Colonial and Modern Aspects.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
WEST POINT, VA., April 21.—West Point, named for Sir Thomas West, 1st Baron, the first Governor of Virginia, dates far enough back to please the most fastidious. Even before colonial days the shouts and war-whoops of the red men went up from this beautiful plateau, sufficiently elevated to secure proper drainage. Standing on the point, five houses looking on the York river may be seen, while the same river presents its splendid sheet of water, free from rocks and shoals, and without a bend as far as the eye can reach. This placid body of water seems to gracefully kiss the shores and then divide to form the Mattaponi and Pamunkey rivers.

Nature has provided, along the shores of these rivers, all the elements for happy homes—a soil producing great varieties of fruits and vegetables. The rivers also furnish cheap food and remunerative employment for hundreds of fishermen and oystermen.

In winter season the rockfish is caught in large numbers, and the famous York river oyster figures largely in many markets.

In spring and summer, crabs, both hard and soft shell, come in abundance, and along with them shrimps, spot, trout and other fish, to say nothing of ducks. As a hunting locality this is equal to any, and is the hunting-ground for the North. Plump partridges abound, the rivers swarm with ducks and geese, and in September and October the marshes are alive with that mysterious bird, the snipe.

After the death of Nathaniel Bacon, in 1676, in Gloucester county, his followers became scattered and demoralized, and were pursued and ruthlessly executed by Sir William Berkeley's adherents wherever found. Some were executed in Accomac, some at Williamsburg, and two were hung in chains at West Point.

Some (three, perhaps) secreted themselves in the Dragon Swamp, in Middlesex county, and were hung to the limbs of a famous old tree in the upper part of Middlesex county, known to-day as "The Royal Oak," though blown down several years ago in a severe storm.

Joseph Ingram, an ancestor of a Confederate, then took possession of West Point, fortified it, and made it their place of arms. In colonial days West Point was the seat for the collection of revenue for the Crown of Great Britain, when taxes were paid in tobacco.

Remnants of the tobacco warehouses stood near the "Point" for a great many years.

For a long time there was a ruined house of stone masonry, which Washington used as his headquarters.

Governor Spotswood, with the Knights of the Golden Horseshoe, traveled all through here in the effort to get to the passage to the Blue Ridge. From Williamsburg they would cross at the Brick House and wend their way to Chelsea, on the banks of the Mattaponi, the home of Governor Spotswood's oldest daughter, en route to Middlesex, and on.

Confederate troops stationed at West Point in 1861, under the command of Major H. B. Tomlin, of King William county, known later as Col. Harry Tomlin. His corps consisted of the following companies: The Taylor Grays, Captain Aylett, known now as Col. William R. Aylett; Barham's, Captain Aylett's, Company; Richardson (now dead); Aylett's, Company; Captain Pollard (dead); Cumberland Company, Captain Timberlake.

There was no active service rendered by these troops while stationed here, but they were mustered and drilled for service.

McClellan landed a large force at West Point in the "Peninsula campaign," and established a base of supplies at the White House, the old seat of the Lees, just across the Pamunkey river, in New Kent county, which subsequently fell into the hands of the Confederates. The White House was built on the site of the old Parke Custis House, the home of Martha, the wife of Washington.

In 1863 gunboats landed Federal troops in West Point. These troops threw up fortifications, which are still to be seen. Some of them are near the "Point" and others about a mile above West Point, on the road to King William Courthouse. These ditches extend nearly from one river to the other, and are very steep and high. "The boys in blue" were for saving themselves when they threw up these breastworks.

Liberty.
There was a man who esteemed liberty above all else.

"I was wont to say, 'as to what I want, I shall eat, drink and sleep, and all I want of it, without let or hindrance.'"

"Of course he paid the price, which is as everybody knows, eternal vigilance, or, in scientific parlance, chronic insomnia."—Puck.

The Royal Cosmetique.
The messenger thundered over the door, and the king, in a panic, fled. Flinging himself from the painting stand, he accosted a group of archers on guard before the king's apartment.

"It was my friend," he gasped, "doth his majesty was impatient?"

"Nay," replied a yeoman, "at this early hour his majesty's wrath nothing except his moustaches."—Puck.
